HAD GRANDSTAND TO HIMSELF

When Officer Moss Located the Fan He Was Cheering Lusty for Imaginary Team—Says He is the Original and Famous One.

Sitting on the high rear seat of the grand stand at the Crimmins park about 2 o'clock this morning, Pauline Case, who claims to be the Casey of Casey at the bat fame, was doing some lusty cheering as an imaginary baseball game with Pauline man Ed. Moss came upon the scene.

In the meantime, however, the owner of the main scene, Melvin Lewis, had hastily made his way to the park to hear the latter talk. Casey said he was cheering for the whitemen and also declared that he was the famous and original Casey.

All of these statements made an impression on the officer, who took Casey to the station house and had him locked up on the charge of being drunk.

PRETTY COATS FOR SUMMER.

Charming Garments Worn with the Lightest of Costumes.

The most charming separate coats of pongee silk and cloth are now shown for wear with summer dresses, the comparatively simple frocks of fine cotton, linen, foulard and pongee, which have to some extent supplanted the suits of these materials. These separate coats are, many of them, quite elaborate, but they need not be so, as is shown in the illustration, it is quite possible to have them entirely untrimmed, save perhaps for a few bands of braid and some buttons, fancy or otherwise, as the taste of the individual wearer dictates.

The model here shown is an extremely desirable one. It is almost universally becoming to the figure, for its long lines give height and slenderness, while the possibilities of fullness in the fronts take from the too flat effect which sometimes mars the beauty of a pongee garment. This fullness, which is due to the two plats in the shoulder into which the material is laid, may be held in all the way down on a coat, which is to be worn by a stout woman, while for a very slender one it may be let out, as shown in the cut, and then caught in again just a little above the waist line.

COMBINE SILK AND VOILE.

One of the Prettiest Phases of the Season's Fashions.

One of the marked phases of this season's fashions is the combining of silk and voile in a curious and interesting way, which makes it difficult to determine which of the two fabrics is considered the trimming of the gown and which is considered its principal material. It is a very good fashion in many ways, for the two materials enhance each other. Moreover, there is something very attractive about the touch of crispness which the silk lends to the voile costume, and the softening qualities of the voile combined with the silk are equally desirable.

In the rather dressy jacket suits, which are worn for afternoon in place of the trim tailored costume, which is usually relegated to morning wear, the combination of materials plays its most important part. Nothing could better serve the purpose of a somewhat elaborate costume, which should be all one tone and without obvious trimming of lace or other entirely extraneous ornamentation. The silk trims the voile and the voile the silk, so that all suggestion of plainness or severity is entirely done away with, while at the same time the costume is kept entirely within the limitations of what is most correct and reserved in street costume.

Novel Method of Trimming.
A novel method of trimming hats by aid of haptins is one of the most original fashions this season. The haptins used for trimming can be bought in a variety of designs. Birds, ribbons and flowers can be attached by the aid of these artistic skewers. The first step is to purchase an untrimmed hat in a nondescript shape which will tone with any gown—such as black, white or straw color. A judicious selection of the most suitable haptins follows. In the morning a flight of birds and black velvet bow can be pierced through the crown. This trimming will be discarded in the afternoon and replaced by roses, violets or lilies, whenever flower tones with the frock. The prettiest combination of blossoms can be contrived by mixing red roses and lilies or violets and pale pink rosebuds—Helen Chat.

Flesh-Colored Stockings.
Flesh-colored stockings are the latest demand with elaborate afternoon or evening gowns, whatever the color of the shoes or gown. In many such cases the shoes are made of the material of the gown. With the costumes of alleged classical effects that are worn now, stockings of flesh that with slippers of another shade may, possibly, be intended as a suggestion of the ancient sandal. Stockings that have no reference whatever to the color of gown or shoes is one of the fads for smart street costumes. Patent leather shoes often accompany such contrasting foot coverings.

Smoothing Finger Tips.
The only way of making the skin smooth under the nails is by constant applications of cold cream and by using only a soft thing, such as a bit of orange wood for cleansing. The latter should be done only after washing the hands, when the grime is soft and is removed without scraping.

If you do any housework or dusting have the nails filled with cream to prevent dry dust going underneath.

SECRETARY LOEB GIVES OUT POSITIVE DENIAL

President Did Not Say That War With Japan Was Probable.

ANSWER TO HOBSON'S STATEMENT

Says "the Congressman Must, of Course, Have Been Misquoted" and Declares No Remark Even Remotely Resembling Denver Quotation Was Ever Made by President.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 10.—Secretary Loeb was asked today if the President would make any comment to make on the speech of Congressman Hobson, in the Democratic national convention at Denver last night, in which reference was made to a reported interview of President Roosevelt regarding a war with Japan. Because of the President's absence during the day on a picnicking expedition, Mr. Loeb did not see the executive until the latter's return from his outing this evening.

The secretary was with the President for three hours this evening, and during his visit directed the President's attention to Congressman Hobson's speech, in which Mr. Hobson had said:

Hobson's Statement.

"I want to say to you that not so very long ago the President of the United States and, in my presence,

"There exists the greatest probability of a war with Japan."

When Secretary Loeb returned the executive office, a copy of the following official statement was issued:

In reference to the speech of Congressman Hobson, Secretary Loeb stated that the Congressman must, of course, have been misquoted. The president, not only never made such a remark, but never made any remark even remotely resembling it. All that the President has ever said is that if there were a sufficient cause there would never be any possibility of this country getting into a foreign war."

Scribner Gets Contract.

Secretary Loeb also said that the Scribner publishing firm had been given all the rights for the serial and book form publication of whatever President might write of his experience on his proposed hunting trip in Africa.

Questioned as to the price to be paid by the firm for the President's written account of his trip, the secretary said he had nothing to give out on that point.

The Basis of Good Society.

"Society," like everything else which is collectively human, is just what its units allow it to be, and this is as true inside the church as anywhere else. The need of the day is no new one—it is for men and women whose example will make them lights and beacons in our politics, our churches, our educational establishments, our "society," and in all our human relations—Philadelphia Public Ledger.
